Adding wallpaper to your Android home screen is one of many ways you can customize your device. There are a lot of free wallpaper downloads available, including on Android Central, which has more than 2,000 designs from which to choose. Deviantart.com also offers free artwork for download. Flickr is a useful resource for quality images, but be aware of copyright issues. There is also a slew of apps that offer free Android wallpaper downloads. Zedge is an app that offers free wallpaper and ringtones for smartphones. There's a free version of the app that's ad-supported and a paid version that's ad-free. The app has all sorts of categories, including anime, Star Wars, animals, designs, drawings, nature, and trending content. If you turn location services on, you can even see content that's trending nearby. Premium images are available that you can either pay for or unlock by watching an ad. You can also upload images and other content and save your favorites. Backgrounds HD app invites creators to submit photos and other images that you can use as wallpaper. The app has unique categories, including live watches (clocks embedded with moving pictures). You can also search by hashtags, such as #cute or #phenomenon. Browsing Backgrounds HD is easy, and you can follow your favorite creators if you set up an account. There are also galleries with themes like minimalism, Christmas and other holidays, and locations around the world like the Matterhorn. Kappboom, also known as Cool Wallpapers, has a massive selection of art in categories like babies, cats, plants, vintage, and love. There are also 3D images you can use. Also, there are two broad categories: Popular and New. When you launch the app, you'll see everything in those categories, but you can select a sub-category to narrow down your options. You can save favorites too (no account required). Tapet generates wallpaper based on your color and pattern preferences, and you can also set up the app so that it changes your background anywhere from weekly to every five minutes. You can align these intervals with your smartphone's clock too. The app also has an option to pull photos from your device when cycling through patterns. There are a ton of settings, including effects like overlay, vignette, blur, brightness, saturation, and textures. Muzel has a vast collection of artwork that it cycles through daily. You can set the artwork of the day as wallpaper for your home screen or lock screen, and it will update every day. It also includes a watch face for Wear (formerly Android Wear), so you can match up your smartwatch with your phone. The app has settings for blur, dim, and grey. You can use sliders to increase or decrease each effect. From your home screen, you can double-tap to bring it into focus temporarily. Your smartphone has a camera, so why not use your photos to decorate your screen? Just long-press on your Android screen, tap Wallpapers > My photos. Next, choose your source: Google Photos, Gallery, or any app on your phone that can save images, including many on this list. Be sure to use a high-quality image that isn't unintentionally blurry or blown out. Thanks for letting us know! Tell us why! The background or wallpaper on your phone's home screen or lock screen plays a substantial part in the device's personalization. For those who like having a theme, a curated library of wallpapers is essential. This article lists ten background applications which you should check out. If you want something more than just an aesthetic change, we also have an article that lists some of the best Android applications you should use to increase or improve your device's usability. The list includes recommended apps for podcasts, device automation, and productivity, to name a few. Before you begin picking a wallpaper, you must understand its sizing and whether it will scale to your display. You can do this by reading its resolution, expressed with two numbers. For example, 1080 x 2400 is the resolution of a 1080p display used on the OnePlus 9R. The first number indicates the width, while the second refers to height. If you're looking for a smartphone wallpaper, you'll want a higher second number and a lower first; this prevents your smartphone from zooming into an image and making it look grainy. If you use a tablet, pick a wallpaper based on what orientation you use your device in, a higher first number if landscape mode is your go-to, or a higher second value if it's portrait. Let's begin looking at app options on Android, so you can pick the best one according to your needs. Abstract Abstract features collections made by Hampus Olsson, an artist known for the stock wallpapers used by OnePlus. As you may have inferred from the name of the app, a lot of the art found within it is abstract. The collection offers over 350 wallpapers and is updated by the creator when they release new artwork. If you've been a fan of OnePlus' stock wallpapers or you like the ones from the Paranoid Android ROM, this application is a great source to acquire them in high-resolution formats. Users can apply them directly from within the application or save them to their gallery for other uses. Do note that at this point, out of the eight available collections, four are locked behind a payroll that requires the Pro Pack. AmoledPix AmoledPix showcases over 10,000 artworks for users to apply as wallpapers. Its primary focus is on providing options that feature deep blacks across a variety of categories which include Anime, Architecture, Quotes, or Cars to name a few. Upon selecting an image, users can also choose to tap on the colors tagged to find wallpapers with a similar aesthetic. The app has a premium version offered via a subscription or a one-time purchase model. Paying the fee will remove ads and allow access to more collections. Backdrops Backdrops, one of the most popular background applications, features collections that showcase photography or vector art. Its catalog is updated daily by digital artists and its community. The Pro version provides users with the ability to apply wallpapers from a Backdrops notification and save wallpapers from the Explore page — otherwise limited to Community and Free Collections. It will also remove ads from the application. Sphaera Sphaera is an application that generates wallpapers based on locations around the world. Users can pick any spot and then customize the generated image with the available style choices. The application claims to work well with custom launchers and that its generated art will fit any high-resolution display. With a one-time purchase model, this application features no ads and has unlimited downloads. Stokie Stokie features a wallpaper collection that contains stock wallpapers provided on devices by their manufacturers. It develops upon these by allowing you to select an image and customize attributes like its brightness, contrast, hue, saturation, level of blur, and RGB makeup. Hence, allowing you to maintain the aesthetic of the wallpaper while making it your own. If stock wallpapers are not your go-to, or perhaps you're looking for something simpler, the application also allows the creation of gradient-style wallpapers. It's free to download but offers an in-app purchase to remove ads, access additional features, and receive priority support from customer care. Tapet Tapet is an application similar to Stokie and Sphaera, in the sense that it allows users to generate wallpapers by controlling specific parameters. It does not offer a collection but instead uses mathematical functions to create patterns. The application uses a swipe-based system to show users various options which they can choose to save to their device. An in-app purchase will provide access to patterns that may otherwise not be available, an option to create a color palette, and the ability to apply Tapet's generated art to the lock screen as a Live Wallpaper. Developer: Adrian Aisemberg Price: Free Unusual Wallpapers Unusual Wallpapers features a collection of over 500 vector-based artworks made by the developer's team. New images are added every Wednesday and Sunday, according to the listing. It charges a one-time fee and offers an ad-free experience with unlimited downloads. Developer: AKINH Price: $1.99 WallCandy WallCandy is another application that caters to users with a device that has an AMOLED panel. It has a catalog of over 5,000 artworks classified as wallpapers that are ideal for your lock screen, or perhaps the notched display on your smartphone. Like most other applications on this list, it offers a feature to change wallpapers automatically. It's free to download and offers no additional purchases. It does include ads which in my experience, did not appear frequently. Wallpapers by Google Wallpapers by Google is a standard recommendation on most background application lists. Even in 2021, this app showcases some of the best landscape, cityscape, or seascape wallpapers. Its daily rotation feature will download images when connected to WiFi and switch between them each day. The application is free to use and features no ads. Developer: Google LLC Price: Free Walpy Walpy is an application that uses Unsplash to source its images but goes a step further than Resplash, another application that uses the same source, by providing users with the ability to edit an image's blur level, brightness, saturation, vignette, and color. While the application is free to download, its listing mentions the presence of in-app purchases, although we could not find any at the time of writing. For those unaware of Unsplash, it's a website known for its free catalog of high-quality wallpapers, also available in 8K resolution. Developer: Raviola Price: Free While these are traditional applications, if you are looking for versions that offer dynamic options, you can also check out Muzie Live Wallpaper. If you liked this list or have some great alternatives you think we may have missed out on, let us know below in the comments.
